Recognizing that many developing countries are highly dependent on primary commodities as their principal source of export revenues, employment, income-generation and domestic savings, and as the driving force of investment, economic growth and social development,

Deeply concerned that, in spite of the recent increase in some commodity prices, the fundamental causes underlying the declining price trend have not been addressed, and that supply capacity problems and difficulties with effective participation in value chains also prevent many developing countries from obtaining full benefits from the current positive conditions,

Recognizing that trade in commodities is a fundamental component of international trade,

Taking note of the targets set out in the Rome Declaration on World Food Security and the Plan of Action of the World Food Summit¹² and the outcome document of the World Food Summit: five years later,¹³ which reaffirms the pledge to end hunger and poverty,

1. Reiterates the importance of maximizing the contribution of the commodity sector to sustained economic growth and sustainable development, while continuing with diversification efforts in commodity-dependent developing countries;

2. Recalls the potential of regional integration and cooperation to improve the effectiveness of traditional commodity sectors and support diversification efforts;

5. Calls upon developed countries that have not already done so to work towards the objective of providing duty-free and quota-free market access for all least developed country products, and encourages developing countries in a position to do so to contribute to improved market access for the least developed countries;

6. Calls upon the international community to address the lack of competitiveness with respect to trade in commodities and to implement measures necessary to improve livelihoods and food security in commodity-dependent developing countries;

7. Stresses that the adoption or enforcement of any measures necessary to protect human, animal or plant life or health should not be applied in a manner that would constitute arbitrary and abusive use of non-tariff measures, non-trade barriers or other standards to unfairly restrict access of developing countries' products to developed countries' markets, reaffirms in this regard that developing countries should play an increasing role in the formulation of, inter alia, safety, environment and health standards, and recognizes the need to facilitate the increased and meaningful participation of developing countries in the work of relevant international standard-setting organization;

8. Calls for capacity-building support by relevant international organizations, by developed countries and by the enterprise sector in the context of corporate social responsibility programmes, to enable developing countries to put in place measures that are appropriate and necessary for meeting standards and other market requirements, and invites the relevant intergovernmental organizations to establish procedures for elaborating product and process standards that take into account the interests and capabilities of developing countries;

14. Recognizes that developed countries account for two thirds of non-fuel commodity imports and stresses the urgent need for supportive international policies and measures to improve the functioning of the commodity markets through efficient and transparent price-formation mechanisms, including commodity exchanges, and to facilitate the use of viable and effective commodity price risk management instruments;

15. Calls upon developed countries, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development and other relevant international organizations to support training and awareness-building programmes on the functioning of commodity exchanges and their use, in a development-oriented manner, in supporting small farmers and in supporting capacity-building programmes in developing countries;
